The U.S. & European stock markets ended the session with mixed results. In Europe, mostly down, Wall Street regained its winning ways as the diverse corporate earnings season has been revealing and quite active.

With the recent bank results being better than expected, some Bank stocks are rising as the interest rate increases will benefit the bank's profits.

The consensus estimates is that profits from most U.S. Public companies will continue to rise even o the scenario of increased costs. That places the stock market in a more bullish tone, we shall see how the next quarters develop.
