The U.S. and European stocks closed with mixed results, with the Dow Jones falling, the S&P 500 and the Nasdaq closing with small gains, and the Eurozone markets closing down. The markets continue to face significant uncertainty as several issues are at play, including the impending U.S. government shutdown; the other problem is that all eyes are on Friday PCE Inflation data, the Fed's preferred inflation metric. The latest Inflation Nowcast expected the PCE to be 3.53% and the Core PCE to be 3.95%; the consensus expectation is that the PCE will remain in its downward trend.

As for the government shutdown, the U.S. Senate voted Tuesday night to advance a short-term funding measure to avoid a government shutdown, which would provide funding through November 17. However, this latest proposal would require a final vote in the Senate and approval from the House of Representatives, raising concerns about the likelihood of approval.

On the economic news, the U.S. durable goods orders rose by 0.16% month-over-month in August, ahead of expectations that called for a contraction.
